

Story: Cinderella - Rewritten from the Point of View of the Stepsister

Part rewritten: Climax of the Story

By Germaine So

I Was Absolutely Furious

After the dancing party last night, my sister and I were so fed up that we broke down in tears as we didn't get the chance to dance with the prince! A beautiful woman dressed in a pure white gown had the chance, and we were completely jealous of her.

After all the crying, a miracle began. The King's messenger came to our house and announced that the prince's new lover had left a glass slipper at the staircase of the palace. Whoever claimed to fit the shoe with her foot would marry the prince.

My sister and I got so excited that we immediately tried the shoe on. Unfortunately, the shoe didn't fit us, and we instantly lost our hope. Suddenly, my ugly stepsister, Cinderella, whom we treated as a servant, came down and asked the messenger a question.

"May I try the slipper too?" she asked. The messenger nodded. My ugly stepsister slipped her foot in, and it magically fitted her! We were all in shock!

The messenger happily said, "My Majesty, you're the Prince's wife!"

After that, Cinderella and the messenger took the carriage and went back to the palace. That made me furious!